Littlebourne Today is a blend of traditional architecture with the comforts of modern living, that have now made the spot a rather popular destination. Currently, Littlebourne has a population of just over 1,500 and despite no longer being an agricultural village, it still has plenty of new housing, a post office, a community store and a well-used hall and recreation ground.

The name Littlebourne itself is said to have been in use since at least the year 690, when a Jutish king called Withred gave five ploughlands called Littlebourne to Canterbury's St Augustine's Abbey.

According to Canterbury's Member of Parliament in the 16th century John Twyne, who wrote a number of books about the local area, the abbot maintained a vineyard in Littlebourne. This is backed up by the fact the village's church is called St Vincent of Sargossa, who is the patron saint of winemakers.
